Teacher

Nicolas is a smart and resourceful young man who is good at conceiving simple and elegant solutions to complex web development problems. As his teacher, I found him to be really talented and at ease with the latest concepts in web development - especially on the backend size. How quickly he went from rookie to Expert in mastering Laravel (one of the most popular PHP frameworks around) still amazes me, and it tells a lot about his potential.

Although he is mainly a developer and a UX designer, he knows enough about visual design to make clean and functional prototypes, a good base over which to iterate for graphic designers.

As a human being, he's a team player, easy smiling and nice to have around. He has opinions and can bring arguments over the table, but always with friendly manners.
